"A two story frame cube of a house with a hip roof and Captain's Walk. The house has a pedimented portico having four columns with Eastlake scrolls.

There are three 3-part windows across the upper floor and a center door balanced by two 3-part windows. The doorway has tall sidelights and a transom very much in the style of Thornton and Mills.

The house stands on a high knoll overlooking farmlands. The front faces West. There is alleged to have been a large ballroom on the East side which burned in the late 19th Century. There is one large interior chimney rising from the Northeast side wall rear and two single brick chimneys rising from the South wall. A small entrance porch is appended to the South corner.

The house is surrounded at a distance of 20 feet by a white bar fence. Within this enclosure a grass terrace rises about three feet to the basement foundations. The situation of the house is bright, airy and most pleasant". (Mrs. E. W. Bridgman, 1970)

The present owner shows little concern for maintenance of the house and it is now at a crucial stage between ruin and feasible restoration.

The floor plan of "Pemberton" is very similar to that of "Hawthorne Ridge" (AA-34-N-a) and it has, or has had, many of the same details. For example, marks on the siding on the east wall of the house show that there was once a proch accessible from the first floor through, presumably, jib-doors and from the second floor through a wide double door. The jib-doors are still in place at "Hawthorne Ridge". The porch there is copied after the original. The stairways at "Pemberton" and at "Hawthorne Ridge" are enclosed in similar, narrow, side-halls. At "Pemberton" the beautifully curved round bannister continues into the attic where one gains access to the "window's walk". The spindles are carefully turned curly maple.

The house has undergone many changes through the years. Three of the original chimneys are gone, much of the original plaster and trim have been replaced with sheet rock and crude wood-work. Many doors and pieces of trim are stacked in the attic. It is interesting to note that the lathe of the original plaster, (visible in the attic) was hand-split.

It is believed that Pemberton" was built by a rielative of Samuel Galloway III, of Tulip Hill" nearby. Anne Galloway, a cousin of Samuel's .. Inarried Joseph Pemberton and this is the most 'likely source of the name of the house. The present building shows many alterations but part of the structure probably dates from The late 18th century.
